I understand that procrastination (or simply known as "postpone") can take away our time to do something important and not hesitate to do something.

I totally agree with the author of this quotation, because procrastination leads us to avoidance of doing important tasks, such as doing homework, chores, shopping and so on. Also a good reason of procrastination is the ill environment for work or studying. We all need a good, stable environment of doing such things, but sometimes, we just can't find them!

As an example, I can say that I sometimes don't think much of doing homework and other things, that sometimes lead to some bad results. Also, every one gets a task to do up to a certain date. A lot of people keep the task untouched until about ^{two to three} 2-3 days. That's procrastination. Another good example: time-wasting video games.

In conclusion, I want to say that procrastination is a pretty bad, but hard thing to avoid. It's very important to keep ^{that you are going} watching your tasks to do. You should not forget what are you told to do, and do everything in time, that way, you are going to have great success and less anxiety.
